Chelsea-based RFR has added to its management team as it seeks to bolster its presence in the UK residential property market.

RFR, a private property office that advises wealthy clients on property-related matters, has appointed Philip Selway as director in a newly-created role.

Selway was previously managing partner at property buying consultancy The Buying Solution until he stepped down last year. He has over 35 years' experience working with national and international buyers.

In his new role, he will oversee the development of the consultancy's strategic partners and institutional relationships, both in the UK and internationally.

"The appointment of Philip represents the next stage of our growth in the residential market and we are delighted to offer his experience and expertise to our clients," said Richard Rogerson, RFR's chief executive.
