There's no sign of post-Brexit caution at Chelsea-based property consultancy RFR, which has just made a raft of senior hires to boost its key practice areas.

First up, the firm has signed up Charlie Noel-Buxton to boost the property investment division. Bringing 20 years' experience to the table – 13 of which were spent as a Partner at Cluttons – he'll be advising clients eyeing everything from single rental opps to major resi portfolios.

Former Farrer & Co. and Allen & Overy lawyer Joanna Stewart has joined as a Client Director, and will be working across all aspects of the advisory practice, while trained architect and native Italian Eva Leone has been hired to lead the design team as Design Director.

Genevieve Hughes, who has 20 years' experience in the fit-out and construction industry, has taken the role of Project Manager to oversee the firm's larger-scale and more complex refurb projects, and chartered accountant Joanne Grindrod is the new Finance Director, in charge of the financial management and strategy.

Richard Rogerson, CEO, RFR: "We are delighted to welcome five new joiners to RFR, as we continue to expand our team of expert advisors. They join us from some of the leading names in the industry and we are very proud to be strengthening our offering across our core practice areas."
